International Journal of Action Research
Volume 1, Issue 1-3, 2005

Special Issue, Volume 1, Issue 1, 2005:
Participatory Action Research in Latin America
Guest editors: Danilo Streck, Carlos Rodrigues Brandão

Participatory research and participation in research.
A look between times and spaces from Latin America 43-68
Carlos Rodrigues Brandão

Bridging the gap between collaborative and realist evaluation:
A general critique and case study of European Union employment policies 311-338
Mick Carpenter

“One sows the seed, but it has its own dynamics”
An interview with Orlando Fals Borda 9-42
Lola Cendales, Fernando Torres, Alfonso Torres

Building capacity for learning and change through reflective conversation 243-262
David Coghlan, Claus Jacobs

To our readers 5-6
Werner Fricke

Labor and regional development in the U.S.A.: Building a high road infrastructure in Buffalo, New York 219-242
Ian Greer, Lou Jean Fleron

Innovation and action research 267-289
Bjørn Gustavsen
A participatory citizen consultation: The case of the state of Michoacán, Mexico

Carlos Núñez Hurtado

Action research and the study of human being

Enoch A. Lambert

Information and its uses in medical practice: A critical interrogation of IT plans and visions in health care

Ingunn Moser

Inside processes: Transitory understandings, action guiding anticipations, and withness thinking

John Shotter

Reconstructing a participatory process in the production of knowledge: A concept and a practice

Maria Ozanira da Silva e Silva

Research as political-pedagogical mediation. Reflections based on the Participative Budget

Emil Sobottka, Edla Eggert, Danilo R. Streck

Introduction – Participatory Research

Danilo Streck, Carlos Rodrigues Brandão

Insertion of Action-Research in the Context of Continued University Education

Michel Thiollent

Action research to improve the human condition: An insider-outsider and a multi-methodology design for actionable knowledge outcomes

Margaret Vickers